Dear fellow sailors,

It is with a certain degree of nostalgia that I write this, my final letter to you. Hard to believe I am about to complete my two-year term as your president. It has been an amazing experience. I have learned so much and experienced so much. What I have learned is that the Flying Scot class is healthy and vibrant, continuing to excel after 50-plus years. Also that Scot sailors are a unique breed, with all ages and all levels of ability sharing the one common denominator of loving and enjoying the boat.

I have also had reinforced certain aspects of racing, which probably apply to life in general, as well. One is that the race is not over until it’s over – a fair breeze can pick you up and carry you to the head of the pack. Another is that no lead is too great – one can stall just short of the finish line and wave to the fleet as it passes by! I’m sure all of us have experienced these situations. You’ve got to keep in the race!

There have been several times when we were not able to execute our starting/racing plan, but at least we had one! What we found out is that, sometimes, all is not lost. We have perhaps sailed our most brilliantly when we have messed up the start and found ourselves at the “unfavorable” end – when we were sailing one way, while the rest of the fleet was on the opposite side of the course. Please know that I do not recommend this strategy! Just pointing out that when things look their worst, they may yet be saved.

Another aspect of racing is that, to quote Don [Griffin], “it gets you out in weather you might normally not be out in” (and actually these can be some of the most fun times). However, he has yet to convince me that this is totally in the plus column! Sometimes, huge waves, heavy wind, and freezing cold are not for me! One other thing I learned is that the Scot can be pleasure-sailed (took many years before that sank in!); it doesn’t always have to be pointed at a mark. Daysailing can be just as exhilarating, just going with the wind for the sheer pleasure of it, or going with a specific cruising objective in mind.

During my tenure, we’ve made a couple of major decisions involving our sanctioned regattas. After trying a new format for the NAC (often discussed since the very first one!), we decided that what was originally set up was the best for all. But I give my Board credit for the courage to try something new. We also have established a new format for the Mid Winter Regatta, with a venue rotation between Sarasota Sailing Squadron in Sarasota, Florida (east), and Southern YC in New Orleans (more central). We are a national association and, in this way, plan to make it easier for the excellent sailors farther west to attend. We have also attempted various formats for our more mature sailors but lacked continued success. We still would like to come up with the perfect solution for them.

In closing, our Flying Scot Sailing Association is extremely fortunate to have a very high caliber of volunteers leading it. I have worked with the most dedicated, hardworking people imaginable. And they are doing what they do simply because they believe strongly in the boat and the class. We have a diverse group on our executive committee and board of governors. And with the varying opinions, we are able to chart the best course for the future. I particularly commend the officers and the Past Presidents’ Council. They have made my job so much easier, and more fun!

To not mention Harry Carpenter would be a huge oversight. Without a doubt, Harry is the stalwart of the class. We always know we have his support and can go to him for suggestions and clarifications. I also thank Courtney Waldrup, our executive secretary, for the support and guidance she has given me.

I wish the new officers and Board the very best of luck. Knowing the support these leaders will receive from the class, I feel sure that the FSSA will enjoy a very successful future. I have felt very honored and privileged to serve as your president. Thank you so much for this opportunity.
Sailing the Midwinters with Age-5 Crew

Dave Osler, FS 5217

This is a story about how to take a 5-year-old to Midwinters as your only crew. I started off with my grandson and his uncle, whose Scot we used. Once again the Navy took away my son, so I made a decision to go anyway. We were to pick up the boat in Virginia, where my son is stationed. It is FS 213, sailed as 5217 (my boat). The first thing I learned was about 7-inch, laptop DVD players and “Bob the Builder” with cartoon tapes, as well. This kept my grandson entertained for the first four hours of driving; then he slept. We arrived in Virginia for the night. David Justin got to sleep outside on a swingset platform, so he was happy. The next day we left for the longer part of the trip. This time he was better with the DVD player, so it worked well. We arrived in St. Pete about 6:00 P.M., after leaving early in the morning. First there was astonishment, then…well…OK. I had told Justin that we would only go if the weather was OK. Off to set up the tent. The only campsite was full with us, so it was tight.

Next morning we registered. Since it was blowing really hard, I put the boat in and sailed just in the harbor. Justin loved the big waves at the end of the harbor, but I knew better. Day 2, same thing again. Day 3, we left the harbor and went out. We used an 80% jib and full main. The waves were still up, so Justin had a ball. I let him steer downwind while I tried to put up the spin. He was passing boats! I decided to leave the spin down and let him have fun. He passed a total of seven boats, and I passed four more upwind. We were 19th out of 33! I was trying to figure out what he had done right! AT AGE 5 HE HAD THE CONCEPT OF “STAY IN THE WAVE AND SURF IT.” Next day, no wind, so we only did one race. It helped that we were close to shore. (NOTE: WE NOW HAVE TO SAIL THREE MILES OFFSHORE, IF THE BREEZE IS FROM THE EAST.) At the awards dinner, Justin got a huge kick out of getting a T-shirt and standing next to Charles Buffington, the VP of the class.

We proceeded back to Virginia. THANK GOD FOR DVD PLAYERS. I've now bought a 10-inch, which is easier to use. Justin wanted to come again this year, but school vacation did not match up.

I would like to thank the Kampfs for making sure I got the mast up and the boat in every day.
Greetings from Fleet 188
“Down the Shore”
at Lavallette Yacht Club

Ron Kiss, FS 5315 and Fleet 188 Secretary

Fleet 188 was founded just a few years ago, through the efforts of our fleet captain, Jim Loughman, at Lavallette Yacht Club in Lavallette, New Jersey. Lavallette is a family-oriented, seaside resort community located “down the shore,” in New Jersey/Pennsylvania parlance. Located on a barrier island between the Atlantic Ocean and Barnegat Bay, it is the home of Lavallette Yacht Club and Fleet 188.

Lavallette Yacht Club was founded over 100 years ago, in 1904, and it is now located on Swan Point, one of the most picturesque spots on Barnegat Bay. It is a superb location for sailing and for viewing spectacular sunsets over the bay. Scot sailors should know a bit about us, since we will be hosting the Atlantic Coast Championships in September 2010.

Lavallette has a long and storied history in sailing. Having produced national champions in a number of classes, from Jet 14s to M Scows, the club has an active junior sailing program with nearly 70 young folks sailing in Hunters, Opti’s, and Lasers (radial and full rig). A summer club, we need to pack our activities into the period between Memorial Day and Labor Day, and there is plenty to do. Everything from bridge, to junior activities, to adult sailing, to Friday night dinners, to dances and parties on Saturday evenings or just hanging out in the “Road to Ruin” room is on the docket at LYC in the summer.

For many members the highlight of the week is the Sunday series. At 10 A.M. for ten weeks ending on Labor Day, Opti’s, Sunfish, Laser Radials, Lasers, and M Scows hit the line in exciting competition for both junior and senior sailors. In the morning the wind is usually light, with an occasional blow. After lunch the morning awards are presented and--the good Lord willing--a sea breeze fills in. The Flying Scots and B-Cats sail out for a 2-P.M. gun. Last summer (when I was vice commodore) we often had too much wind, causing more races to be abandoned than anyone cared to see. In fact, after an inauspicious start to the afternoon series (meaning we had cancelled racing for the first couple of weeks), I was determined to get a start for these sailors.

The sea breeze was blowing 15 to 18, and the B-Cats and the Scots sailed out to the starting area. I set the line and the course and watched as the wind built to 17, with higher gusts. Scots can handle that, so we started their sequence; when we sounded the gun for the start, I found the wind was up to 19 knots. Hmmm! That’s a bit much for the B-Cats, but I kept checking the wind speed. That didn’t help – it was still building. So I elected to abandon the B-Cats again. Some were not happy, but most recognized this as a prudent decision.

The Lavalette Yacht Club seen from the water.

Another beautiful sunset in Lavallette, New Jersey!

Meanwhile the Scots had finished a physically demanding beat and were starting the leeward leg. By now the wind was up into the mid 20s, and I was trying to decide if this race, too, needed to be abandoned. The two lead boats, sailed by Peter Scott and Dean Horrocks (who sailed my boat for the Sunday series), had popped their chutes! I was amazed at their daring. They were literally flying down the leg within a few yards of each other when there was a sudden shift and a gust. Like synchronized swimmers, they headed up and flipped! Patrol boats converged and Peter and his dad, Bill, waved off any assistance. After about ten minutes (seemed like an hour to me), they had their boat up and sailing. Meanwhile, FS 5315 had also been righted, but it appeared the main was cleated. As I studied the situation, I saw a ball floating 50 feet behind the boat, which was slowly sailing west. The “ball” turned out to be Dean’s head! And the slight list on the boat was caused by crew Tom Hanley clutching the windward shroud. Needless to say, this boat needed patrol assistance to get the skipper and crew back aboard.

When I checked the remaining fleet of five boats, I found they were all mast-side-up and grinding down the second beat. They had not used their chutes or had quickly doused them when they saw the leaders’ carnage. I gritted my teeth and prayed they would all finish safely, which they did! The afternoon awards saw some pretty pleased sailors receive their flags, pleased because they had completed one of the most challenging races of the season. Peter Scott did finish and went on to win the season championship by a point over Dean Horrocks.

Besides our Sunday series, all members are eligible to sail in the BBYRA regattas hosted every summer Saturday by one of the twelve clubs forming that YRA. Last year the Flying Scot fleet had 15 starts over the ten-week series. In 2009 we will have 17!

So keep September 2010 in mind for the Atlantic Coast Championships at LYC with Flying Scot Fleet 188. For those who sailed the 2008 NACs at Toms River, Lavallette and her sailing waters are a couple of miles north of the Seaside Bridge. While there are never any guarantees in sailing, the late summer on beautiful Barnegat Bay is usually terrific. Come join us! 🎧

There have been Stockwells from our branch of the family loitering around Massachusetts for 10 and 11 generations, with some of the best of times “messing around in boats.” My dad taught sailing on Lake Massapoag when he was growing up in Sharon, outside of Boston. Having a wife named Sharon often serves to remind me of where our roots are. Some of the 11th-generation nephews have learned to sail at Marblehead. My grandfather used to take my dad and uncle on vacation to Wellfleet on Cape Cod, so Dad knew that their harbor was mostly dry at low tide. When my parents built their dream house out on the Cape, they chose Provincetown, partly for the magnificent scenery, partly for the teeming bustle of the downtown, but-most important to me--for 20 fathoms and several square miles of crystal-clear harbor water.

My dad taught us how to sail, too, mostly in P-town harbor. A very cool, very serious six-year-old named Noah would often shuttle us out to our mooring. The 10-foot-tide made docks impractical and also meant that many moorings were dry at low tide--no place for a keel boat. Sometimes Noah would have to walk us half the way back later that afternoon. But that also meant there were lots of shells and crabs to find on the flats at low tide. The water was very deep over by the deserted beach on Long Point, and the views there were unbeatable (except for the sunsets over the bay at Herring Cove beach). And except for when there wasn’t, there was always wind!

I’d always admired an old, beamy, wooden centerboarder named Manuella. She had a fractional rig with a big main and a wooden boom that stretched all the way back to the transom. An old salt used to come by and take her out, and it seemed he would FLY off the mooring before we had even hanked on our jib. We’d never catch up, but we were glad we didn’t have to take care of all that wood.

P-town is also known for its wonderful restaurants and artist colony. I had no idea that seafood could be that good! The town has sort of a flair, something like Key West. You have to be ready and accepting to really enjoy yourself.
Initially my dad got a traditional catboat, but the harbor mooring proved to be too rough for the simple, wedged-in mast. The Cape Dory 18’ day sailor he replaced it with was as pretty as it was indestructible, but the three-foot hard keel always made us cautious about how much water we had, and it meant that the boat had to be launched, stored, and maintained by the boatyard. When Sharon and I looked for a boat, we knew we wanted a beamy centerboarder with big main but very little varnish. We were hoping maybe we could FLY, too.

We found what we wanted in the Flying Scot. Very little maintenance, and I could work on it in the backyard, and there were no storage fees. Best of all, we were mobile! Deep Creek, Fredericksburg, Cape Cod, Cape May, Nockamixon — we could go sail wherever we wanted!

Before one can travel, however, the trailer has to be prepared to ensure reliable service, with the two main concerns being the tires and the bearings. My nemesis had been the bearing protectors designed to keep pressure on the grease in order to exclude water. Mine had a habit of falling out. I snugged up the hub and installed a new unit for the 320-mile trip up to the Cape. We checked it frequently and found it was snug, and the hub was cool all the way up!

John Santos at Flyer’s boatyard in P-town had said he knew just what a Flying Scot was and that he would be glad to see us back after almost 15 years. Flyer Santos was Noah’s grandfather. There had been a big expansion since the old days, and Noah had grown up. He and his dad, John, were now partners. Noah invited us to race him and his Rhodes 19 out to Long Point, but perhaps the most heartwarming thing was that they had just finished refurbishing Manuella. It was great to see her looking so good!

I had taken the time to prepare FS 5097 for heavy air and more open water. I had rigged an optional traveler to keep the main sheet out of the motor and flatten the main, installed jiffy reefing, and led the vang and a new Cunningham back to a console cleat we could play when hiked out. The launch induced a déjà vu – a stiff onshore breeze with choppy waves during the first voyage of the catboat with my dad. I had decided beforehand to motor out to the mooring, but the motor wasn’t starting and the wind was blowing us back into the cement curbing on the ramp. My son and I could not paddle fast enough. We made it eventually, but it only occurred to me later that we had sailed off our own beach dozens of times in conditions like this, less the waves. We could have left the motor at home and been better off!

There was an unusual east wind all that week. We sailed all around the mooring fields and easily through the narrows between the town pier (where the ferries, whale watch, and fishing fleets dock) and the breakwater, but “backwards” due to that east wind. We then rounded the breakwater to find the authentic replica of the slave schooner Amistad that had been built at Mystic Seaport. The wind died for a while so we decided to put some hours on the motor, but it picked up again later. We took the opportunity to launch the only spinaker I’d ever seen in P-town harbor. We got several compliments on it when we arrived back on shore. Later that week we sailed out to Long Point Light and took pleasure in landing the Scot right on the beach. The view, the shells, and the water were as good as they had been years earlier, but a few too many partiers from the Long Point shuttle had unfortunately left a mess for us to remember them by.

Later that week the breeze seemed a bit high, but we thought we should go out and reef, or see if we could just let the sails way out and reach across the harbor. The jib made such a fuss while hanging off the mooring that the sheets wrapped around the halyard winches and the kids hid under the foredeck. We ventured out into the harbor, but the east wind meant that there were several miles for the waves to build up instead of a few hundred yards, and we headed back in.

That evening we went to a restaurant that looms large in our personal histories, but we found it was not as good as it had been 20 years earlier. Our kids loved the scallops at Tip for Tops’n, though, and the Wellfleet drive-in theater still had the silly 1950s cartoon of the hot dog jumping into the bun that they had when I was a kid. The playground and snack bar are still there, too. They have an FM broadcast now for the sound, but you can still put a speaker box in your window if you want the complete drive-in experience!

Retrieving FS 5097 Friday morning was no fun; it was nearly an adventure. We had beached her and casually began packing things away, when we realized we could not move her back into the water to get her back on the trailer! The tide was going out – fast! After some furious rocking and digging, and with the help of a few bystanders, we got her back afloat and onto the trailer.

The sting of the recovery was lessened later that day by the best whale-watching trip we had ever had. Too many humpback sightings to count! The food and the beer on board the Portuguese Princess II were good and a good deal, and this helped us be accepting, if still reluctant, to head back towards home the next day. (A sail in Narragansett Bay on a brother’s Cape Dory 25’ didn’t hurt either!) We checked the bearing protectors every step of the way, and they seemed to be snug as a bug once again. But, alas, it was not meant to be: we lost one, apparently only a few miles from our house! I looked down at the end of the driveway really expecting to find it there, but no. Well, if that was the worst thing that happened, it must have been a pretty darn good trip!

Our next big trip with FS 5097 will take us full circle, back to our roots in Sharon, Massachusetts, for the Wife-Husband Championship. We’ll all be getting the “lubsta.” Hope to see you there!

Sailing

— In loving memory of my grandpa, Frank Riefenhauser —

The sapphire water drifts by,
As we skim above the surface,
The wind is picking up,
Perfect.

It is all in your hands,
Whichever way you want to go,
You can set yourself free,
Peaceful.

You see other boats race by,
So you do everything to keep up,
Your soul is at a high,
Exciting.

Whatever you want to do,
You can,
Because this is your own world,
Enjoyable.

The scenery takes your breath,
And you wish life looked this way,
It is like your own personal paradise,
Beautiful.

It feels so amazing,
The boat and the water,
Everything you are used to,
Natural.

Everything around you seems to dance,
As you drift by on open water,
Refreshing you, it can’t be real,
Enchanting.

One mistake and you mess up,
The difficult winds, and water,
Hopefully you know what you’re doing,
Tricky.

Nothing is like the sensation,
Of sail boating over the water,
One place that is your own,
Unique.

Greenwich, Connecticut, is lucky enough to have a Flying Scot in its Memorial Day parade. David Osler, a member of Fleet 7 and Old Greenwich Yacht Club, has been entering his boat as a float in the parade since 1999, when the town asked the club for a bigger float. In the photo, FS 5217 carries David’s grandson, Justin, whom you may remember sailed with David in the 2008 Midwinters in St. Petersburg. Also on board are David’s granddaughter Isabella and children of other members of the Old Greenwich Yacht Club.

The parade progresses through the village and has about 1,000 marchers, with over 1,500 spectators looking on. The Girl Scouts and Boy Scouts participate, along with five marching bands, including the Sound Beach Fire Department. Also in the parade are seven fire companies, three ambulances, the mayor and his assistants, and all four state representatives. Some years the governor and/or assistants also march. Lots of antique cars carry the veterans and other VIPs, and there are even unicycles interspersed in the parade. At the end are all the decorated bicycles ridden by their proud owners. After the parade, everyone honors the veterans at a park at the end of the parade route. This is a large event for Old Greenwich; the only event that is bigger each year is the St. Patrick’s Day parade. And Flying Scot is part of it!
